Bid documents should clearly lay out a deadline for bids and how late bids are treated - contact the procurement team for advice as needed. All over £100k excl vat procurements should utilise the etender system, below this value Sell2Wales can be used. Makes sure that if you want suppliers to visit site as part of the bidding process that this is reflected in the wording of your procurement documents. Suppliers have to be treated equally in this respect – contract the procurement section for advice as required. It is possible that budgets can be compromised by purchases which are unplanned, especially close to year end. Remember to tell the end user when their procurement has 'gone live' so that they can alert any interested suppliers about the opportunity. Remember the need to check that prospective suppliers have not been prosecuted for breaches relating to E&D responsibilities. This is part of our Equality Duty Wales. When procuring certain services we have a duty of care to observe due diligence where we are/may be working with vulnerable adults or children?		Check to see if your procurement documents need to account for this and if you are unsure, seek advice from HR before publishing procurement documents.
Is the legal position i.e. terms and conditions included in the procurement documents?		Make sure your procurement documents contain 'small print' written in the University's favour. Consult the procurement team for advice as required, we may be able to help with model terms & conditions.
When procuring certain higher risk services have we thought about the Bribery Act and how it might impact on the contract we enter into?		When we enter into contracts with, for example, overseas agents who recruit students to AU, what protection do we put in place in our procurement documents to protect us and the agent from bribery in such contracts?
If we are buying equipment, have we let the Finance Office know so that they can check for insurance implications for what we might buy?		When we buy certain equipment e.g. drones/UAV's etc or anything which could come into contact with/interfere with the operation of other authorities (e.g. civil aviation, railways etc) we should consult with the Finance Office before we commit to a purchase (so we can check the insurance risk). Freedom of information – Have you thought about including an FOI clause or wording in your procurement documents?		It is considered good practice to have an FOI clause in most contracts. Consult the procurement team or Julie Archer infstaff@aber.ac.uk for advice as reqd.
When procuring certain services we need to make sure any Welsh language implications are accounted for in the contract documents.		It is imperative that any and all bi-lingual considerations are covered in relevant services contracts. Consult the procurement team or Gwenno Piette gws@aber.ac.uk for advice as reqd.
For major contracts (typically construction related) Welsh Government expects us to consider whether any Community benefits might accrue from such activity?		Work closely with Estates to see whether such contracts are meritous of community benefits clauses.
Have you thought about the modern slavery legislation and whether it impacts on your procurement?		It is important to make sure the supply solution you choose does not utilise inappropriate supply chains. Should you be asking a question about this?

Does your procurement documentation include a certificate of non-collusion and form of tender document?	You can get copies of both from the Procurement team. These forms bring certainty in terms of suppliers signing to say that will act appropriately, professionally and honestly when bidding for your requirements.
Does your procurement documentation take a ' whole life cost ' approach to evaluating the price/cost element of your purchase?	Particularly for goods and construction, consider asking suppliers to quote you prices on a 'cradle to grave' basis so that you understand the full cost implications over the life of your purchase.
Do you need to consider supplier performance at all as part of your purchase?	Do you need to factor in acceptance testing of new equipment or perhaps need to have regular performance reviews after award for services contracts? If yes, contact the procurement team and we will do our best to help you with the wording for your procurement documentation.
